Came to Salt Lake Last Monday and Has Not Been Heard From Since That Time.

(Special Correspondence.) Eureka, July 30.—The town is very nuch excited over the sudden and mysterious disappearance of James B. the Giffin, the city watermaster. Mr. Giffin went to Salt Lake yesterday afternoon without leaving any word with his wife or friends. He is supposed to have boarded the train at Mammoth Junction or Ironton, as no one saw him enter the cars here.

According to the estimates based on last month's collections, Giffin should have nearly $400 of city money. He nad a month's salary, $82.50, due him, which leaves a little more than $300 to be accounted for. The city will lose nothing, Watson M. Nesbit and James Crooks being on his bond for $500.

Giffin owed some money to other parameters. Giffin owed some money to other par-ties, but had not been pressed for it and had assurances of any aid he might need. ing lunches within.

On arriving at the beach a rush was made for the bath rooms, and presently stately club women appeared in fetching bathing suits and jaunty caps, and skipping lightly down the steps, were soon floating on the placid waters of the lake. They joked and laughed like a lot of school girls out for a holiday, and one of them pleasantly remarked: "This will doubtless prove a permanent cure for mental indigestion, with which, I fear, we have all been more or less afflicted."

Colonel Eskridge has a magnificent war record. He was born in Missouri. According to the official army register, he was mustered into service with the Second Ohio infantry Sept. 10, 1861, and the year following received his discharge. But in '64, the rebellion being at its height, he again enlisted, this time in the Second Missouri cavalry, his home regiment. He was a sergeant in the Fourteenth Missouri cavalry. In August of the same year he became
